3. On the other hand [] the struggle for leadership, 25X1 however well hidden, is inevitable in the USSR. For this reason [] 25X1 [] there is a contest now going on in the Presidium over who 25X1 shall rule. [] 25X1
 among the lower Party workers, most of whom prefer to remain uncommitted to any faction, but probably exists between the "Old Guard" of the Presidium and the newer and younger members. In the "Old Guard" [] 25X1 Molotov, Khrushchev, Voroshilov, Kaganovich, Mikoyan, and Shvernik, and among the younger members, Malenkov, Saburov, and Pervukhin. In this regard [] 25X1 [] when Kaganovich, in his speech before the railway workers in May of this year, put Khrushchev before Malenkov in a sentence citing their Supreme Soviet speeches, he was expressing the order in which he, Kaganovich, would like to see them. [] the "Old Guard" regard Malenkov as 25X1 an interloper.
4. [] the length of time it took for Kaganovich's speech to be published 25X1 and the length of time it took for Khrushchev's speech to the Builders' Conference in December 1954 to be published, [] the delay 25X1 was because of a desire on the part of those giving the speeches to look at them carefully before publication. [] speeches are generally 25X1 written by ghostwriters and are often given by the speaker without his knowing clearly the exact words. The speaker would then probably review the words carefully before they were printed as the official text, and the pressure of other work might account for the delay in publication. In the case of Khrushchev's speech in Czechoslovakia, which changed from the original live broadcast when it was printed the next day, [] changes would have been made by Khrushchev himself. [] this 25X1 often happened, [] there is a great deal of difference between a 25X1 spoken speech and the same speech when it is printed in an official newspaper as a policy statement.
